"Having read your advertisement about your Speirs-Levy counting chamber in the 'Blood' I take the liberty of begging you to supply me with the above mentioned apparatus. I am dealing with the problem where this apparatus is indispensable in cell-counting in exudatory fluid, but sorry, apparatuses available here are far inferior to the one you produce/as you can count the cells of only 1.8 cmm with them, while with yours those of 8 cmm/. So it would be an invaluable aid in my experiments, which in consequence of lack of such an apparatus had to be stopped.

"However I must communicate with you that owing to foreign currency restrictions in this country, the amount of costs cannot be remitted for the time being. Would you kindly furnish me your cell-counting chamber gratis, I should be greatly indebted to your firm, as it would enable me to continue and carry out my work. Having finished my experiments with your kindly help, may I beg you to be allowed to refer to your firm in my work."
